Dr. Marlow Dies.

The death of Dr. Frederick William Marlow of Toronto, eminent as a consulting surgeon, removes another Canadian played an important part in this country's participation in the Great War. As Assistant Director of Medical Services for Military District No. 2. Dr. Marlow, a Colonel in the Canadian Army Medical Corps, had a great deal to do with the men who enlisted for overseas, and he won the respect of all of them. He had supervision of training camps, and part of his duty was the medical care and examination of men preparing for war service. His organizing ability was recognized when, on conclusion of the conflict, he was asked to go to Quebec to untangle difficulties that had arisen in connection with the reception and handling of hosts of returning men.

of the medical profession. He had served as house surgeon at St. Michael's Hospital, and for many years held high position in the General Hospital, where he performed the first operation when it was opened for the reception of patients. Following two years' study in London, Dr. Marlow became Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons. had been President of the Ontario Medical Association and of the Academy of Medicine. Dr. Marlow was zealous and successful in the discharge of his professional duties, and in time of war served his country well. There will be general regret that a man of his recognized ability and energy should, at the comparatively early age of 59, be removed from the scene of his many and important activities.

Dr. Marlow was an outstanding member

ĩ